2011 Primary Care Review Course

The Barry University Primary Care Review course has been specifically designed to assist physician assistant students and physician assistants in their preparation for the NCCPA certification and recertification exams.

The course closely follows the NCCPA content blueprint in the selection of topics and overall organization to provide a well structured review of the subject matter in the certification and recertification exams.

The course also highlights the major aspects of primary care clinical medicine and will be useful for primary care physicians, family practitioners, physician assistants, nurse practitioners, and students in all these disciplines.

Each lecturer will present outlines, objectives, and practice questions for their respective topics, which will be organized in a comprehensive electronic syllabus and provided to each attendee.
